Dwayne,

That's a far cry from your first email. Why in the hell would I file a 1040 with a schedule C-EZ? Why should I pay $200 in payroll taxes and now FICA too? Which you didn't even address.

Give me the name of your accountant, unless you tell me you are doing it yourself. If you don't, I'll go to your Captain and all the way to the Sheriff if I have to. I have talked to several people that are in accounting and they sent me to IRS.gov which that state what qualifies for an independent contractor and it's not a 1 who works for camp. I have been assured you can't get around not paying FICA. I will check with my attorney and see if he had copies of your tax return from last year because I doubt you filed a 1040 with a C-EZ schedule. Prove it!

I have no intentions of paying for your mistakes.

can be an independent contractor.

does need to file a 1040 with a Schedule C-EZ and pay the self employment tax. does not claim which allows you to still claim It should be around $200 or less.

Do you have an accountant? They should know this information.

Everything you addressed about Federal Income tax is true, but that doesn't rule for FICA. That always has to be paid.

Doesn't change the fact that can't be an independent contractor.

Are you going to tell me the name of your accountant or not? I have some questions for him and unless you are saying you are doing this on your own? I want written clarification.

income is below the $5700 income threshold, therefore, does not need to be listed as earning income. Everyone that earns more than $600 is issued a 1099.

not listed on tax returns. So you don't have to pay taxes on what earned. You get the $1000 tax credit for

Dwayne,

I'm in the process of having my taxes done and was told that should not be 1099'd as is a minor and is not a sub contractor or own own business.

Why does not have a W-2? Why would I be responsible for paying taxes?

I attempted to contact Steve Rotroff and was told he no longer works there nor are they doing your PAL taxes.

Please advise and/or give me the name of your current CPA or accountant.
